WASHINGTON, Feb. 29. The interest excited by Mr. Seward's speech attracted a vast audience to the Senate this morning. All the galleries were throughd long before the Vice-President took his seat. long before the Vice-President took his seat. The bright Spring colors on the ladies' side produced a fine effect when contrasted with the sombre hues opposite. The whole spectacle was much more striking than any produced this Winter.

The speech occupied nearly two hours and a half, during which time the attention of this large assemblage was preserved without any palpable diminution of numbers. As an intellectual effort, it exhibited great ability, with careful preparation and thought in every part, pervaded by the calmness of a philo-sophical and statesman-like mind.

Progress of the Blavery Question. Progress of the Slavery Question.

Seconded these applications, and claimed that the whole Louisianian Territory was right-fully open to Slavery, and to the organization of future Slavery states. The Labor States Republican Party.

SPEECH OF HON. W. H. SEWARD, Delivered in the U. S. Senate, Feb. 29.

Mr. Parsident, the admission of Kansas into the Union, without further delay, seems to me equally necessary, just, and wise. In recorded debates I have already anticipated the arguments for this conclusion. In coming forward among the political as-trologers, it shall be an error of judgment, and not of disposition, if my interpretation of the feverish dreams which are disturbing the country shall tend to foment, rather than to allay, the national excitement. I shall say nothing unnecessarily of persona, be-rause, in our system, the public welfare and happiness depend chiefly on institutions and year little on men. I shall allude but bristthe control of capital, wringing out the fruit the capital to the capital the capital than the cap consideration of an honest and enlightened cassian, American, Malay or African, he is 🖟 castism, American, Malay or African, he is the subject of two distinct and opposite ideas— one that he is wrongly, the other that he is rightly a slave. The balance of numbers on either side, however great, never completely— xtinguishes this difference of opinion, for there are always some defenders of slavery outside, even if there are more inside a Free Number of the state of t State, while, also, there are always outside it there are not inside of every Slave State, many who assert with Milton, that "no man ho knows aught can be so stupid as to deny that all men naturally were born free, being the image and resemblance of God himselt, and were by privilegs above all the creatures, born to command and not to obey." It often, perhaps, generally happens, however, that in considering the subject of Slavery, society seems to overlook the natural right or personal interest of the Slave himself, and to act exclusively for the welfare of the citizen. But this fact does not materially affect ulti-mater sults, for the elementary question of the rightfulness or the wrongfulness of Slavery inheres in every form that discussion robe ming it assumes. What is just to one class of men can never be injurious to any ether; and what is unjust to any condition of persons in a State, is necessarily injurious in round degree to the whole community. An economical question early arises out of the subject of Slavery—labor either of freemen or H-nee two municipal systems widely diffor our arise. The Slave State strikes down and question arises, whether Slavery is a moral, social, and political good, or a moral, social, and political cril. This is the Slavery question at home. But there is a mutual bond of amity and brotherhood between man and man throng out the world. Nations examine freely the political systems of each other and of all proceeding times, and secondingly as they approve or disapprove of the two sys-tems of capital and labor, respectively they reaction and prosecute, or condemn and pro-king commerce in men. Thus, in one way or in another, the Slavery question which so tunny among us who are more witney to rule than patient in studying the conditions of society, think is a merely accid-atal or unnecessary question that might and ought to be settled and dismissed at once, is, on the contrary, a world-wide and endering subject of political consideration endering surject of political consideration and civil administration. Men. States, and actions entertain it, not voluntarily, but because the progress of society continually trings it in their way. They divide upon it, not processly, but because owing to difference of constitution, condition, or circumstance, they cannot agree.

The lathers of the Republic encountered it. They even adjusted it so that it might have given us much less than our present disjutes, that not circumstances afterward courred which they, wise as they were, had not clearly forescen. Although they had not elearly forescen. Although they had min-wired, yet they generally condemned the practice of Slavery, and hoped for its discontinuance. They expressed this when they asserted in the Declaration of Independence, as a fundamental principle of American society, that all men are created equal, and have inaltenable rights to life, liberty and the secont of heaviless. Fach State because as setted in the Declaration of Independence, and Jimidamental principle of American so-cety, that all men are created equal, and this time the eapital States seemed to have presented in the principle of American so-like inalignable rights to life, liberty and the principle of American so-cety, that all men are created equal, and this time the eapital States seemed to have become fixed in adtermination that the Fed-philar in Land and the seemed to have become fixed in a determination that the Fed-cetal government, and even the labor States, until its sovereignty was restored by a combination of sister Republics exposed to the same danger, and apprehensive of similar should recognize their slaves, though outside of the slave States and within the Territories of the United States, are property of which the master could not be in any way, or by any anthority, divested; and the labor States, in the constitutional doctrine that slaves often our landed on our shores, and distributed, unreclaimed and with the capital in some States, in others capital had then ever before, by the great development of free labor, more firmly than ever insisted on the constitutional doctrine that slaves voluntable responsible. Everywhere complaint and the Common Territories, or into labor States, are pertithers disagreed, debated long, and compromised at last. Each State, they determined, shall have two Senators in Congress. Three-fittles of the slaves shall be elsewhere repres at dual be taxed as persons. What should be done if the slave should escape into a later State? Should that State confess him to be a climite!, and restore him as such, or inter State! Should that State confess him to be a charted terror and consternation to be a chartel, and restore him as such, or might it regard him as a person, and Larbor sampeted terror and consternation throughout the land. Another compromise was man! They compromise the extension of Slavery. Throughout the land. Specific enactments admitted was made. On the decision was suspended the question, as was thought, whether ultimately the interior of this new continent should be an asylum for the oppressed and the exile, coming year after year, and agater age, voluntarily from every other civilized land, as well as for the children of our own, or whether, through the renewal of the African slave-trade, those magnificent and luxuriant regions should be surrendered to African slave-trade, those magnificent and luxuriant regions should be surrendered to the control of capital, wringing out the fruit of the earth through the impoverishing toil question of 1860, so far as principle, and even the field of its application was concern-ed. Every element of the controversy now present entered it then; the rightfulness or he wrongfulness of Slavery: its effects, presout and future; the constitutional authority of Congress; the claims of the States, and of their citizens; the nature of the Federal Uniin-sning to be such in practice—cannot so of Congress; the claims of the States, and of congress the claims of the States, and of characteristics. Now, when the present condition of the various parts of the Louisianian Territory are observed, and we see that capital retains undisputed possession of what it then ob-tained, while labor is convulsing the coun-try with so hard and so prolonged a struggle to regain the lost equivalent which was then guaranteed to it under circumstances of so great solemnity, we may well desire not to be undeceived if the Missouri Compromise was indeed unnecessarily accepted by the Free States influenced by the exeggerations of the dangers of Disunion. The Missouri debate disclosed truths of great moment for ultorior use.

The Whig party, being generally an opposi-tion party, practised some forbearance to-ward the interest of labor. The Democratic party, not without demonstrations of dissent, was generally found sustaining the policy of capital. A disposition toward the removal of Slavery from the presence of the national capitol appeared in the District of Columbia. Mr. Van Buren, a Democratic President, langular appeared in the Columbia and the column of the co launched a prospective veto against the anticipated measure. A Democratic Congress brought Texas into the Union, stipulating practically for its future reorganization into four Slave States. Mexico was incensed.— War ensued. The labor States asked that four Slave States. Mexico was many four Slave States. Mexico was many four Slave States. Mexico was many four states asked that the Mexican law of liberty, which covered the Territories brought in by the treaty of peace, might remain and be confirmed. The The Democratic party refused. The Missout if debate of 1820 recurred new, under circumstances of heat and excitement, in relation stances of heat and excitement, in relation the Government of the United States holds now suspended over so large a portion of the continent of North America! states of lead and excitement, in relation to these complexes. The defenders of labor took alarm lest the number of eapital States night become so great as to enable that class of States to dictate the whole policy of the Government, and in case of constitutional resistance, then form a new slaveholding confideracy around the Gulf of Mexico. By this time the capital States seemed to have become fixed in a determination that the Federal government, and even the labor States, should recognize their slaves, though outside of the slave States and within the Territories of the United States, as property of which the

Under the auspicious influences of a Whig success, California and New Mexico appeared before Congress as labor States. The capital States refused to consent to their admission into the Union; and again threats of Dis-

"When the grave shall have closed over its design of the properties of the condition, not as capital but as a person." What was the action of the fathers in Congress? They similated the new States of the Earthwest as capital States, because it was a person. too great distruct of the efficacy of that new bond of peace, and had replaced them with partisans who were only timid, but not unwilling. The Democratic President and Congress heattated, but not long. They revised the last great Compromise and found, with dolighted surprise, that it was so far from continuing the law of Freedom of 1870 that, on the other hand, it exactly provided for the abrogation of that venerated statute; may, that the compromise itself actually killed the spirit of the Missouri law, and devolved on Congress the duty of removing the life-

how truly, that the Union recled under the vehemence of that great debate. Patriotism took counsel from prudence, and enforced a settlement which has proved to be not a final one; and which, as is now seen, practically left upen all the great issues which were involved. Missouri and Arkansas were admitted as capital States, while labor obtained as a reservation, the abridged but yet comprehensive field of Kansas and Nebraska.

Now, when the present condition of the late, the cause of Freedom and Labor, so up-late, the cause of Freedom and Lahor, so un-expectedly and grievously imperified in the Territories of the United States.

I will not linger over the sequel. The pop-ular sovereignty of Kansas proved to be the State sovereignty of Missouri, not only in the persons of the rulers, but even in the letter of an arbitrary and ornel code. The perfect freedom proved to be a hateful and intolerable bondage. From 1855 to 1860, Kansas, sustained and encouraged only by the Republican party, has been engaged in successive and ever-varying struggles, which have taxed all her virtue, wisdom, modera-tion, energies and resources, and often even her First.—That it is easy to combine the physical strength and martial courage, to capital States in defence of even external increasts, while it is hard to unite the labor States in a common policy.

States in a common policy.

States in a common policy.

States have a natural facility for alarming that loyalty by threatening Disunion.

Third. That the capital States do not practically distinguish between legitimate and constitutional resistance to the extension of Slavery established by local laws in the capital States.

laws. The capital States complained of Courts and Legislatures in the labor States for interpreting the constitutional provision for the surrender of fugitives from service so as to treat them as persons, and not property, and they discriminated against colored persons of the labor States when they came to the capital States. They denied in Congress the right of p. tition, and embarrassed or denied freedom of debate on the subject of Slavery.

Mr. President, did ever the annals of any Government show a more rapid or more complete departure from the wisdom and virtue of its lounders? Did ever the Government of a great empire, founded on the rights of human later, slide away so fast and so far; and moor itself so tenaciously on the basis of capital, and that capital invested in laboring men? Did ever a free representative Legislature, invested with powers so great, and with the guardianship of rights so important, of trusts so sacred, of interests 50 precious, and of hopes at once so noble and so comprehensive, surrender and re-nounce them all so unnecessarily, so unwise-ly, so fatally, and so ingloriously? If it be

When Kansas was writhing un-der the wounds of incipient servile war, because of her resistance, the Democratic press deridingly said, "let her bleed." These new concernates collated with the existing statutes, panelty, the Ordinance of Slavery.

It is in America that these things have happened. In the nineteenth century, the reacting statutes, panelty, the Ordinance of the world's greatest progress, and abolished the open and the articles of Texas annexation, distinct the Missouri Prohibitory law of 1820, and the articles of Texas annexation, distinct the Alpsson of Slavery in all the Territories of the Suited States. publican party encounters, unexpectedly, a new and potential issue—one prior, and therefore paramount to all others, one of ma-tional life and death. Just as if so much had not been already conceded; nay just as if nothing at all had ever been conceded to the interests of capital invested in men, we hear menaces of Disonion louder, more distinct, more emphatic than ever, with the condition annexed, that they shall be executed the moment that a Republican Administration, though constitutionally elected, shall assume the Government.

I do not certainly know that the people are prepared to call such an Administration to power. I know only, that through a suc-cession of floods which never greatly exche, and subs which never entirely discourage me, the volume of R-publicanism rises higher and higher. They are probably wise, whose apprehensions admonish them that it is already strong enough for effect. Hitherto the Republican party has been content with one self-interrogatory—how many votes it can east? These threats enforce another—has it determination enough to cast them? This latter question touches its spirit and pride. I am quite sure, however, that it has hitherto practiced self-denial in so many other fooms, it will in this emergency lay aside all impatience of temper, together with all ambition, and will consider these extraordinary declamations seriously, and with a just moderation. It would be a waste of words to demonstrate that they are nuconstitutional, and equally idle to show that the responsibility for disunion attempted or effected, hinst rest not with those who in the exercise of Constitutional authority main-tain the Government, but with those who

But what are these hidden pur-poses? You name only one. That one is to unavowes! Dut what are the the poses? You name only one. That one is to introduce negro equality among you. Suppose we had the power to change your social system, what warrant have you for supposing that we should carry negro equality among you? We know, and we will show you, if you will only give heed, that what our system of labor weeks out, wherever it works cut anything, is the equality of white men. A profound respect and friendly regard for the Vice President of the United States has induced me to weigh carefully the testimony he has given on the anti-ect of the hostility against the South imputed to the Republican purty, as derived from the relations of the representatives of the two parties at this capital. He says that he has seen here in the representatives of the lower Southern States a most resolute and carnest spirit of resistance to the Republican party; that he per-ceives a sensible loss of that spirit of brotherhood and that feeling of loyalty, together with that love for a common country, which are at last the surest cement of the Union; so that, in the present unhappy condition of affairs, he is almost tempted to exclaim, that we are dissolving week by week, and month by month; that the threads are gradually fretting themselves asunder; and a stranger might suppose that the Executive of the Uni-ted States was the President of two hostile Republics. It is not for me to raise a doubt upon the correctness of this dark picture, so far as the Southern groups upon the canvas are concerned, but I must be indulged in the opinion that I can pronounce as accurately concerning the Northern or Republican repconcerning the Aorthern or Republican representatives here as any one.

I know their public haunts and their private ways. We are not a hostile Republic or representatives of one. We confer together; but only as the organs of every party do, and must do in a political system which obligas as to act sometimes as partisans, while it requires us always to be patriots and statesmen. You see, Sir, that whether we go for or against Slavery anywhere, we must follow Southern guides. You may change your pilots with the winds or currents; but we, whose mativity, reskoned under the North Star, has rendered us somewhat superstitious, must be excused for constancy in following the guidance of those who framed the national ship and gave us the chart for its noble voyage.

In their waning strength. I do not know a possible disuncinist among them all. I believe they will be as faithful to the Union now as they were in the by-gone days when their ranks were full, and their challenge to the combat was always the cry of victory. But if it shall prove otherwise, then the world will all the sooner know them in their waning strength. I do not know a possible disuncionist among them all. I believe they will be as faithful to the Union now as they were in the by-gone days when their ranks were full, and their challenges to the combat was always the cry of victory. But if it shall prove otherwise, then the world will all the sooner know that union ground; that the American people will sustain no party that is not capable of making a sacrifice of its ambition on them. making a sacrine of its amount on the star of the country; that, although a party may have never so much of prestige, and never such traditional merit, yet, if it be lacking in the one virtue of loyalty to the Union, all its advantages will be unavailing; and then obnexious as, through a long-cherished and obstinate prejudices, the Republican party is in the Capital States yet even there it will in the Capital States, yet even there it will advance like an army with banners, winning the favor of the whole people, and it will be armed with the national confidence and sup-port, when it shall be found the only party that defends and maintains the integrity of the Union. Those who seek to awaken the terrors of disunion seem to me to have too hastily considered the conditions under which they are to make their attempt. Who believes that a Republican Administration and Congress could practice tyranny under a Constitution which interposes so many checks as ours? Yet that tyranny must not only be practiced, but must be intolerable, and there must be no remaining hope for constitutional relief before foroible resistance can find ground to

The people of the United States, acting in conformity with the Constitution, are the supreme tribunal to try and determine all po-litical issues. They are as competent to de-oide the issues of to-day as they have been heretofore to decide the issues of other days. They can re-consider hereafter and reverse, if need be, the judgment they shall pronounce to-day, as they have more than once reconsidered and reversed their judgments in former times. Slavery, with us are political, not social or personal differences. There is not one Disninionist or disloyalist among us all. We are altogether unconscious of any process of dissolution going on among or around us. We have never been more patient, and never have never been more patient, and never the new of the social control o altogether unconscious of any process of dissolution going on among or around us. We have never level more patient, and never level then mow. We bear the same testimony for the people around us here, who, though in the very centre where the bolt of disumtor must fall tirst, and be most fearful in itseffects, seem never less disturbed than now. We have the same testimony for all the Districts and States we represent. The people of the North are not enemies but friends and brether ren of the South, faithful and true as in the days when death has dealt his arrows promiscuously among them on common battles on any syldenoes of a different temper in the South; but we shall be content with expressing our belief that hostility that is not designedly provoked, and that cannot provoked to casual excitements, which cannot perpetuate at alternation. We are engaged in no new transaction, not even in a new dispute. Our fathers undertook a great work for themselves, for us, and for our successors—to seek a free and Federal empire, whose arches shall span the North American Continent, and States we represent. I remain now in the opinion I have uniformly expressed hore and elsewhere, that these hasty threats of diamnion are so unnatural that they will find no hand to execute them. We are of one race, language, liberly, and faith; energed, induced, in varied industry, so diversified, brings us into more infimate relations with each other than any other people, hewers homogeneous, and though living under a consolidated government, and though living under a sense little government, and it is certain that a part discovered must perish. You may refine as you please among the structure of the government, and say that a breach by one of the State or by Congress, of any one article, absolves all the members from allegiance, and that the States nave some certain time a part discovered imits perish. You may retine as yon please among the structure of the fixates or by Gongress, of any one article, aborters all the ment-bors from atteglance, and that the States may separate when they have, or fancy they have cause for war. But once try to subvert it, and you will find that it is a government of the whole people—as individuals, as well as a compact of States; that every individual member of the body politic is conscious of his interest and power in it, and knows that he will be helpless, powerless, hopeless, when it shall have gone down. Mankind have a natural right, a natural instinct, and a natural capacity for self-government, and no other,—they are sufficiently ripened by culture, they will and must have self-government, and no other,—they are sufficiently ripened by culture, they will and must have self-government, and no other,—they stranged all previous undvokanding among men, adapted it to these inherent estands, the anatomy of the great system, who thinks that its only bonds, or even its airongers ligaments, are the written compact, or even the multiplied and thoroughly ramified roads and thoroughlares of trade, commerce, and social intercentre. These are strong indeed, but its chilectal instruments of cohesion—those which reader it inseparable and indivisible—are the millions of fibres of sullions of contented, happy human hearts, bindling by their infectious, their ambitions, and there has ever existed, which takes equal hood always of their wants, the irret, the last and the only such one that has ever existed, which takes equal hood always of their wants, their withes and their opiolons; and appeals to them ait, individually, once in a year, or in two years, or at least in four years, for their expressed consent and renewal without which it must cease.
